From Google Workspace to Microsoft: A Migration the Team Dreaded, Delivered With Confidence

A migration the team feared would be painful became, in their own words, being 'set up for success' on Microsoft.

Executive Summary

Moving off Google Workspace onto Microsoft, the organization needed migration, shared file storage, controlled permissions, and data-security guidance. NGEN LLC migrated the environment, stood up a managed shared drive with structured permissions, advised on security, and now provides ongoing access to an expert team and recurring webinars.

NGEN LLC's Approach

Key Actions:

- Planned and executed a full migration from Google Workspace into the Microsoft environment.
- Set up a centralized shared drive to support collaborative document workflows.
- Configured and managed a structured permission model to govern file access.
- Advised on data security best practices to strengthen the organization's posture.
- Provided ongoing enablement through webinars and access to a responsive team of experts.

Results

- The team moved fully onto Microsoft without a disruptive cutover, the migration they had feared would be painful.
- Files now live in one managed shared drive rather than scattered across individual accounts.
- Documented security recommendations and a managed permission model replaced ad-hoc access with structure.
- Ongoing expert support the client describes as 'swift' with 'a wealth of experts' available.
- In the client's own words, the team is now 'set up for success' with NGEN in their corner.

The Challenge

- The organization needed to migrate entirely off Google Workspace and onto Microsoft without disruption.
- A centralized shared drive was required to consolidate files and streamline team collaboration.
- Access needed structured, managed permissions to keep sensitive information properly controlled.
- Data security guidance was needed to reduce risk and build confidence across the environment.
- Technology complexity created frustration and a need for responsive, knowledgeable expert support.

Solutions

- A single Microsoft environment for the whole team, replacing the prior Google Workspace setup.
- A shared drive where files sit in one central location instead of scattered across the team.
- A managed permission model that defines who can access which files, replacing ad-hoc access.
- Documented data-security recommendations the client can act on to reduce exposure.
- Ongoing access to NGEN's expert team plus recurring webinars, praised as swift and 'a wealth of experts.'
